(August 2008) (Learn how and when to remove this template message) The Ã;rea now known as Duxbury was inhabited by people tà £ o early as 12000-9000 BC By the time European settlers arrived here, the royal £ it was inhabited by the Wampanoag, who called this place Mattakeesett, which means "place of many fish." [1] In 1620, English settlers known as the Pilgrims established their colÃ'nia near Plymouth. By the terms of its contract with financial remunerated in London, they were forced to live together in a community close for seven years. At the end of this term in 1627, the land along the coast was atribuÃda to settlers for farming. Thus, the Plymouth coast to Marshfield, including Duxbury, was divided, and many settlers have begun to move away from Plymouth. [1] John Alden House, construÃda 1653 First, those who settled in Duxbury came to work their new farms only in the warmer months and returned to Plymouth during the winter. Nà £ o take long, however, before começarem to build houses on their land, and then asked permission of the £ colÃ'nia to be defined as a separate community with its church prÅ<sup>3</sup>pria. Duxbury, which originally included the land that now Å © Pembroke, was incorporated in 1637. [1] Some of the most influential men in colÅ'nia received donations in Duxbury and became its first lÅderes. Capita £ Myles Statish, the military leader of colÅ'nia, lived in "The Nook", an area now known as Standish Shore. Elder William Brewster was for many years the religious leader colÃ'nia, where he led services for the colÃ'nia minutes © get your próprio minister in 1637. John Alden was another important Meetings of the lÃderes colÃ'nia. The graves of some of the first settlers of Duxbury can be found in old buried in Chestnut Street, next to the site of the original £ Meeting. [1] The theory is that the city was named by Myles Statish aft the property of the family in northern England had many lands and large properties, including the two main familiar headquarters of Standish Hall and Duxbury Manor, in Lancashire, since before The ages. The will of Myles Standish outlines his heritage rights for very private lands near and around Standish family lines; And so it has been suggested that he named the new city in Massachusetts after the property where he grew up. [1] Duxbury was mainly an agricultural community along the 17th and 18th. His quiet history in the Seculo 18 alone was interrupted by the Revolutionary War, the British opposition was quite fierce in Duxbury, with multidrets reuniting regularly on Captain Mount to burn effects British officers in protest against the Stamp Act. In 1775 General Thomas Gage had to dispatch a regular company to the city, in response to legalists' appeals in Marshfield, Massachusetts. [2] When the alarm sounded Minuteman on April 19, 1775, with news from Battles in Concord and Lexington, many volunteers met with the regiment of Colonel Theophilus Cantodão de Plymouth, Kingston and Duxbury, headed for Marshfield To wrap the British. The colonial officers held a war council at the home of Lenente-Colonel Briggs Alden in Duxbury, the age of naval construction, immediately began after the American revolution. After the Treaty of Paris, the newly born nation was granted fishing rights in large banks. Several families took advantage of the new opportunity and began to build large fishing schooners. Therefore, the Constructed Scholarships in the DÃ © 1790 gave way to larger brigues and ships, eventually, of three masts. As several families of merchants began to accumulate large fleets, shipyards and other auxiliary inductions flourished and prospered Duxbury. At De Each of 1840, Duxbury was possessed by Ezra Weston, who came to be known as "King Sar" due to his success and influence. Weston began to build small vessels in 1764 and soon became famous for his successful merchant fleet. His son, Ezra Weston II, who inherited from his real father nickname, would bring the Industry to his height. London Lloyd recognized Weston as the owner of the largest fleet in America, and this decision was confirmed by Daniel Webster in a speech in 1841. His Impection, a Precursor of Vertical Integration, dominated the city . [1] The Naval Building era in Duxbury ended so quickly as he began. At the end of 1850, the sailboats were made obsolete by other modes of transport, such as steam ships and railways. While other Massachusetts cities grew up, Duxbury has entered a long economy declining. [1] There was, however, a silver lining. At the end of 1870, Duxbury of rural caracter and untouched bay began to attract vessel visitors. Duxbury soon gained a reputation as a resort of summer idiot. With the 1871 conclusion of the Duxbury & Cohasaster railroad, [5] a large Boston city-folk number could afford $ 1.50 for a return ticket and enjoy the refreshing environment of Myles Standish, concluded in 1898, was the result of this tourist influx. [1] This pattern continued in Duxbury well for the sleeping 20. It was not until the construction of Route 3 that transportation to Boston has become convenient and population of the city It increased even more with the arrival of thousands of residents all year round.
