By Chad Davis | Zsolt Nyulaszi/Hemera/Getty Images Create your own professional fax cover sheets in Microsoft Word 2013 by downloading free templates from Microsoft Office. The New backstage view in Word lets you search, browse and download templates from the online collection. After you've created a template, fill in the necessary information, such as contact information, fax numbers and subject. You can also insert a fax cover sheet at the beginning of the document you want to fax using the Object command on the Insert tab. Open Word. If the New backstage view doesn't appear, or if you already have another document open, click "File" and then "New." The New backstage view provides a list of recommended and recently used templates. Type "fax cover" into the Search for Online Templates field at the top and then press "Enter." The search results display a list of templates that you can use as a fax cover sheet. Select one of the templates for your fax cover sheet. For example, select "Fax Cover Sheet (Standard Format)." Click the arrows on the right or left of the preview to view the adjacent template. Some templates require additional Office apps to be installed, such as those with an "eFax" banner across the template's preview or thumbnail, as these templates can connect to third-party software. Office apps are third-party programs that can extend the functionality of Microsoft Office but may require additional software, purchases or subscriptions. Click the "Create" button to open the selected template. If this is the first time you've created a document with this template, Word downloads it first before you can edit it. Open Word and then create a new document based on a Fax Cover Sheet template. Alternatively, you may choose to fill in your information manually on a separate line. Enter the fax recipient's information. For example, type the recipient's name after "To," a fax number after "Fax:" and then her contact phone number after "Phone." Enter your information on the cover sheet. For example, type your name after "From:," your fax number after "Fax:" and then your contact phone number after "Phone." Including your contact phone number in a fax is helpful in case the fax is received by someone other than your intended recipient. Enter the rest of the fax information. For example, enter a brief description after "Subject:," the current date after "Date:" and then any notes you want to include after "Comments:" or "Notes:" Click "File," select "Save" and then save your fax cover sheet to your preferred storage location. Open the Word document to which you want to add the fax cover sheet and press "Ctrl+Enter." A new blank page is added to your document. Click at the top of the blank page to place the cursor. Click "Insert" and then select the "Object" command, resembling a white box with a blue border, in the Text group. Click the "Create from File" tab and then click the "Browse..." button. Select the fax cover sheet you wish to add to your document and then click "Open." Your fax cover sheet appears at the beginning of your document. Below are five ways to make awesome fax cover sheets using Microsoft Word. 1. Include the Most Essential Information The purpose of a fax cover sheet is to ensure the rest of the fax reaches your intended recipient. To do this, the fax cover sheet should include the following information: Recipient's name and fax number. Especially if you're sending the fax to a large organization, it can easily get lost or ignored if it's not clear whom the fax is for. Sender's name and contact information. Also include your company name, fax number, telephone number, and email address so the recipient knows how to respond to you. Total number of pages attached. This helps the recipient verify that they've received all the pages you intended to send. Date and time of transmission. This is particularly important for time-sensitive information. Message. Add a short message or summary of the fax to give proper context. 2. Keep It to One Page The fax cover sheet shouldn't be more than one page long. Any more than that, and you'll be taking the recipient's attention away from the main communication. Also be mindful that everyone is busy, so cut out anything that isn't essential. Your fax cover sheet shouldn't be longer than one page. 3. Use a High-contrast Design Fax machines are notorious for distorting the transmitted image. Besides, you never know if the receiver's machine is running low on toner! Increase your chances of sending a clear fax by choosing a fax cover template with a high contrast and uncluttered design. It should be easy to read and scannable. 4. Stick to Legible Fonts Whichever Word template you choose, use fonts that are simple and legible. A fax cover sheet isn't the right place to experiment with unusual fonts that make your message hard to read. Stick to conventional fonts with tried-and-true legibility. Simplicity is key. 5. Remember Your Branding Premium Word templates are fully customizable so you can reflect your branding. The fax cover letter is part of your organization's overall branding. It should be visually coherent with your other communication and marketing materials. So, choose a fax cover template that allows you to include your company logo, name, and other identifying design elements. By following these tips, you can create a fax cover sheet in Word that achieves its purpose: getting the fax to the right person and achieving the response you need.
