If any of you decide to try it, please leave a comment below so I can see if it works at all. The support of Fortnite 120FPS comes from epic games, not asus. There is no "modding" way the game. Support will have to come Epic games. Also remember that at the moment the Fortite does not even support 60 fps on this phone, and on Android graphics are rather terrible to start, at 120 fps, you should be able to unlock it, the game will seem garbage. If you play exclusively to Fortnite to a decent framerate it is your goal, in that budget, I would recommend getting a iPad Mini 5. It works at 60fps smoothly, it doesn't seem so bad and it's a great way to play. It works great for me. If you absolutely have to have 120fps, you will need to shell more money for a PC or for an iPad Pro. Currently FortiTe supports 60 fps on the ROG 2 phone, but sets your graphics up to operate at 60 fps. Switch to any higher tax returns to 30 fps, but it is always possible to move from a low height for a better FPS stability. Last modified: January 26, 2020 I had Fortnite running at 120 fps on my S20 ultra using the parallel space and editing the same things you're talking about in space. It does not say 120 fps, says the option, but here is a screen to show you that it is possible. Last update: August 26, 2021 I need an internet connection to play for Fortnite? Yes.
