Adirondack high peaks trail map pdf

Editor's Note: Please follow the DEC and CDC guidelines to adhere to social distancing while hiking and recreating outdoors during this public health crisis. Hikers are asked to stick to trails close to home and only hike with immediate household family members. Read more from the DEC » Photo Credit: Edith St-Laurent Relying on your phone or GPS device to navigate is often very useful - but you never know what could happen! If your gear shatters or becomes water damaged, you'll need other resources to help guide you. This is why it is extremely beneficial to have a general idea of how to utilize a map and compass. Learning how to use these basics could save your life! Check out these map and compass basics along with resources to useful maps of the Adirondacks. Map And Compass Basics: The compass needle ALWAYS points north. Rotate your compass until the needle points to the 0-360/N point. Place the compass on the ground, keeping the needle in that direction. Place your map next to it. Rotate the map until its north side (or the "north" arrow) also faces north. (On most maps, the top faces north.) When you determine the appropriate direction by using the map, take note of the bearing (degree-number on the compass), and walk to the farthest-away landmark (tree, rock, etc.) in that direction. Repeat steps 2 and 6 until you reach your destination. Need some helpful area maps? Check out the resources listed below.
