THINKING, FAST AND SLOW

DANIEL KAHNEMAN

WINNER OF THE NOBEL PRIZE IN ECONOMICS

~ (Genre: First Edition Business Date: 2013 Amazon pages ~ 4.6/5 Description Two systems drive the way we think and make decisions, explains Daniel Kahneman: System One is fast, intuitive and emotional; Both systems are slower, more sophisticated and more logical. Kahneman examines how both systems work in the mind, revealing remarkable abilities and the biases of quick thinking and the ubiquitous influence of intuitive impressions on our thoughts and decisions. It engages readers in a personal conversation about how we think, shows where to trust our intuition, and how to leverage slow thinking versus a two-subsystem approach to the standard model of a rational economic agent. Kahneman's work was particularly influential, transforming cognitive psychology and opening up new areas of behavioral economics and happiness. In this innovative book, Kahneman shows how the mind works, offering practical and insightful insights into how we make decisions in our business and personal lives, and how to protect ourselves from the mental flaws that often cause problems.
