The GAMCA medical test is a mandatory health check for expatriates seeking employment in Gulf regions . Conducted at authorized medical centers, it assesses physical and mental fitness and screens for diseases that could hinder work or pose public health risks. Passing this exam is crucial for obtaining a work visa. Passing the GAMCA Medical Test for a GCC Visa: What You Need to Know GAMCA Rebranded as Wafid, India's Medical Screening Platform for Immigrant Workers Recent changes have introduced a new platform for immigrant workers in the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC). GAMCA has been rebranded as Wafid, and its main goal is to screen applicants for infectious or serious health conditions before granting visas. Are results available immediately? Depending on condition, some may require a wait period of 36 months, while others depend on medical advice. Express services are also available at select centers, although fees vary for these 24-hour options. The GAMCA/Wafid medical screening process in India involves online registration, appointment booking, and comprehensive health evaluations, as well as secure result reporting. The estimated cost of this service ranges from 6,500 to 8,800. Results are generally valid for 6090 days and can be downloaded from the official portal. To minimize stress, it's recommended to book appointments early, choose reputable testing centers, and follow pre-test instructions carefully. If any issues arise, don't hesitate to seek additional opinions or support through official channels.
