There are many good programs to find duplicate files, based on the filename, size and hints, but finding duplicate songs can be more complicated. After all, if you have the same recording in .mp3 and .m4a formats, you have duplicate songs that are not duplicate files. So you need to search for metadata, the additional information that defines the content of a file. Specifically, you need a program that can match songs with the same title and by the same artist (because Smash Beak's mouth, "the believer", is not a duplicate of the original monases). " You will also have to remember that no list of duplicate songs generated by the software will be perfect. It is possible that a show does not realize that the Beatles and the Beatles are the same group. Nor can it always be differentiated between the original studio recording and the live version of the concert. (I've met deadheads with probably ten versions of "Brokedown Palace"), but the right program can give you reasonably accurate lists to work with. Here are three I can recommend: iTunes: Well, no, I wouldn't recommend you download and install iTunes just for this purpose, but if you're already using it, you have a pretty good search tool. Simply select File à ~À Show duplicates. If you have the same song as a .mp3 and a .m4a, iTunes will list both, but you won't find any .wma versions. Duplicate Cleaner: This free duplicate search engine from DigitalVolcano has some music features that are worth it. Once they have pointed it to their from music, select the music search option. Below that, I recommend that you review the artist and the title and the album of disarm, then click Ir. But there is a serious failure: the duplicate cleaner does not considerduplicate if they are in different formats. In my tests, a .wma and a .mp3 of the same song did not appear together. Abee MP3 Duplicate Finder: If you are willing to delete $20, and all your music is in .mp3, .wma, and/or .ogg files, this is your best option (or at least the best I know). Abee allows you to search for duplicates or "similar files", and with the later option, you get some pretty smart options. You can control the degree of similarity of the artist and the title (that Beatles vs. the Beatles theme) and set the amount of time the difference is allowed. Once it gives you list of possible duplicates, it offers many options to play, delete or move files. (Click on the image to see more closely). Add your comments to this article below.
