Fortunately, many talented musical artists have been able to express these feelings in more beautiful ways than we can never expect. While 2020 has been a truly terrible year for many reasons, there was at least one area where it does not fail us: music. Case in question? These incredible songs of some of the greatest recording artists of 2020. Here, we heal a collection of the most powerful musicians of the year, each of which highlights and takes advantage of the artist's ability to express unusual messages - and The vibration so fully with our emotions that we do not need more to put those feelings into words. If you are looking for a song to encourage your spits or give a voice to the subcurrent of angst that is flowing through us all in 2020, one (or several) of these titles will certainly talk to you. This year, the Canadian composer Dan Snaith, A.K.A. Caribou, launched "Never come back", a captivating dance addicted song that appears in the ilbum 2020, suddenly. Known to elaborate experimental loops and house sounds / dance style, Caribou has traditionally been one of these artists whose music is delightfully difficult to fix. Photo Courtesy: Nick Pickles / Getty Images in a statement released with the unique, Caribou revealed that "has never returned" was the first song in his new llbum to unite. "As soon as I landed in the main chords of the synthesizer and repeated refraction, the rest has joined very quickly and naturally," he said. "I felt like I was my job to get out of the way and do not overcome or overcome. Sometimes the best pleasures are the simple." And for a year, when simple pleasures have been all many of us we had for support as we sail so many unprecedented events, the simplicity and optimism of this range are more than welcome (and greatly appreciated). Covid-19 pandemic trials of Covid-19 of 2020, including mass locks and shelter guidelines in place, requiring, forced many people to take a look uncomfortably from their habits, their relationships, their jobs - and their lives in general. In fact, we were given a taste of what the future could have when our day-to-day disruptions were no more relevant and we were struggling to deal with the achievement of what it was truly important. Photo Courtesy: Leon Bennett / Sta2020 / Getty Images Imagine images Maybe no song sums up universal angst about what the old age "and the inconverters of everything you see," can bring like Moses Summney's me in 20 years. "To get the full effect, observe the video clip, which was called "an emotionally devastating and painful and painful vision in the visions of Moses of the Future." When you want to release your worries in it, this track It's like therapy. And there's no better music on this list to play while you're crying everything. Diana Gordon joined Miami Native Yves tumor to produce a stirring duet called "Kerosene!" In the dog. Tumor Album 2020 for a tortured mind. Yves tumor became known as an artist who had earlier blurred the lines of glam rock, hip-hop, electronics and other gains, a reputation that more than defending in his last work - and especially in this strip of the prince. Photo Courtesy: Burak CIN GI / Getty Images "Kerosene!" It is a perfect reflection of the tumor's ability to easily create the beauty of chaos, a message that could not maintain more relevance than in 2020. As Nadia Youles of the Skinny, " Between chaos, I'm calm. to calm you through this, and it is a calm, all us now. "How do you totally fit what appears to be the most annotable year in the registry." There must be More than blood "is a peak of a song of a car seat 2020 music from the car seat, making a door less open. Paradoxically dyed with sadness and hoping , the lyrics speak with the central need of connection mankind, reflecting that "there must be more than blood that keeps us together / there must be more than the wind that takes us away. "Picture Courtesy: Tim Mosenfelder / Getty Images Entertainment / Getty Images and these letters touch a little deeper questioning many of us have had time to get involved in year. Sometimes it seems that there should be a reason why everyone should have We are going through this - as if it were something brighter around the corner we won through lasting 2020. And "there must be more than blood" gives the smallest pit of hope that this Be the case. You can accept the most eight minutes music in your version from the Estone or Actual Version launched by Frontman Toledo "Both are stirring and spectacular. Spanish sensation Rosalía returned T Á "its flamenco roots this year with the liberation of "I swear", which translates into "I swear" in English. In all aggressive music, fueled by the guitar, the letters describe the mourning of the singer being separated from the love of his life - a man who was in prison - and his promise to do whatever it takes to make him released. Photo Courtesy: Kevin Winter / Getty Images Entertainment / Getty Images Maybe it could never be a song like this were more relevant than for a time when police violence requires prison reform and prison abuse Abuse sanctioned by the government of indocumented immigrants are front and center in our collective conscience. And the pop-infused melody of rosaliÁa is actually a gloomy and poignant reminder that many times there is much more to a story than the traditional narrative "good vs". If you are europop or hip-hop fan, you will discover a lot to love in "impact", a band that finds Swedish forces of singer-songwriter Robyn joining forces with the rapper channel-producer based on Compton and British Singer-singer SG Lewis to produce a new hit of glessing flex. The effortless mix of Robyn eupholic vocals and deep three channel, Bassline equitation rhythms blend to create the things that the dance floor hits are made. Photo Courtesy: Rick Kern / Getty Images Although it is almost like a 1990-friendly club beat - think a Kylie Minogue BOP beginning with tons more soul - ÁfÁ Á © also has many exclusive touches, that is, the trio à € ~ Á Á Á Á Á Á Á Á Á Á Á Á € bling chemical and sneakily lyrics. At a time when we can all use a little pick-me-up, this is the perfect music to put a stut stut back in the step of anyone. An election year is already difficult to deal with when it is not happening simultaneously with a pandemic. But this year - at the top of a global health crisis - the United States seemed to become more politicized than ever before. And nothing summarizes the disgust many of us experienced about the state of the policy than "J $ T", a collaborative triumph of hip-hop straight from Mike and El-P killer, the Masturnds for back the jewels. Photo Courtesy: Runhejewels / Youtube This Fire Strip See Double Junction Forces with Pharrell Williams and Anger Against the Zach La Rocha Machine To create a politically loaded masterpiece that does not leave Nothing outside the table. From the state of the economy and political leadership to the voting, slavery, education and chronicness of capitalism, the music has a fearless look for the state of America and the world in general. By staying surprisingly worthy of dance, "Ju $ T" is also a hymn for citizens frustrated throughout the country. And it's the perfect beat to blow up while you're drawing signs of protest. Bad Bunny, whose true name is Benito Martí É Nez, stereotypes shattered at this year with the launch of "Yo Perreodo Sola", which In "I take alone". Bad Bunny - Who has always been a defender of the LGBTQ community and for women's rights - created the music to tell the story about a Woman who "wants to have a good night dancing alone ... without having to deal with ass." Photo Courtesy: Bad Bunny / Youtube, but even more than serving as an hymn for independence, the music is also about empowerment and the importance of safe spaces. Visitive Non-ON signal in the background of music music, which "no less" is a reference to a Latin American movement to combat inequality and gain abuse against the trans community. The creative director of Veheo, Stillz, noted that Bad Bunny "wanted to impact and give a message to the Reggaeton community that is usually not open to talk about the LGBTQ community." This definitely deserves a sincere ovation. In addition, there is any other 2020 music that can be more appropriate at this time of social distancing than a dedicated band to dance for us - and totally enjoying this? If there is, it is not so much fire as this. Fiona Apple's "Under the table" is a Shoutout for people everywhere that are tired - Biting your bangs by a question of social expectations "and with letters like" I would beg I disagree, but begging disagreeing with me, "that could not disagree. Be clearer. The singer revealed that the music was inspired by an expensive dinner she watched where someone said something she found offensive. Photo Courtesy: Gary Miller / Getty Images "So I called the guy. And you may have played dinner a little. But I was right, "explained the singer. With a hook that negligently repeats the lyrics" I will not shut up, "the music echoes the feelings of one Á © Poca in which more and more people are speaking to Let your voices be heard - a refraction especially for a year, when the demands for a swollen social and racial justice to the historical and "closing" peaks could have been a survival threat. As Christina Aguilera and the capacitor of Nicki Minaj, and orally fixed BOP "Woohoo" from 2010, Cardi B and Megan The Stallion's "WAP", a delightfully shameless celebration of sexuality, shook the Internet (and our speakers) 10 years later. While the lyrics officers demanded a little tonification for the youtube release of the video clip, they are still far from being tender and offer a fearless perspective that is, in the words of Mikael Wood at Los Angeles Times, one " Savage ... ex-positive triumph. "And triumphant is exactly what we need to feel on the treadmill of everything that happened this year. Photo Courtesy: Cardi B / Youtube The escort Girl Features of Veheo Potence Features Files for a number of amazing singers, including Rosalía, Normani, Mulatto Sukihana and Rubi Rose. You may want to follow Halle Berry's leader, who confessed to Twitter that she exploded the melody of the security of her car to avoid reaching the unexpected ears of her children. But let's face: you It would be totally forgiven if you do not. We deal with enough this year, and finally it's time to sit down and enjoy the music. Música.
