Best automatic movement watches under 1000

Looking for an automatic watch for under $1000? Look no further than this amazing collection of timepieces that are well worth the investment. The best automatic men's watches under $1,000 will keep you stylin' and profilin' like Ric Flair without having to remortgage your home. There are countless reasons for owning an automatic watch like they're never out of style, the craftsmanship is always of high quality, automatic watches last a lifetime and can be passed down through generations. Best Men's Watches Under $1500 For 2021 So, whether you want something practical, something dressy, or something flashy, you can find whatever you need with one of these fifteen kickass automatic men's watches under $1,000. Best Automatic Men's Watches Under $1,000 Tissot Le Locle Swiss automatic precision without having to pay exorbitant Swiss prices is a pretty damn good deal. It doesn't hurt that this watch looks good in just about any situation, plus a scratch-resistant sapphire crystal window will make sure that it will last you for as long as you need. Buy Here Laco Aachen Pilot Watch This pilot-style watch is a German import, and it's built with the original WWII design. It's a great piece of history that you can wear every day, and of course, it comes with the knowledge that it has over 70 years of time-tested quality behind it. A great watch and a great conversation piece all in one. Buy Here Seiko Presage This gorgeous watch is a part of Seiko's prestige line, and it's no wonder, as it marries tasteful beauty with Japanese precision. It's great as a dress watch, or as an everyday watch, comparable in both style and quality to much more expensive watches at a fraction of the cost. Buy Here Hamilton Intra-Matic Silver Dial Watch The silver dial adds just that extra touch to make this watch uniquely beautiful with a classic - and classy - style that makes it perfect for dress or casual wear. It's also made in America, which sets it apart from virtually every other quality watch. USA! USA! USA! Buy Here Bulova BVA-SERIES Automatic Watch Another American watch, this Bulova is self-powered through the movement of its wearer, meaning that it will keep on ticking as long as you keep wearing it. Its unique design adds a touch of skeleton style while still retaining a classic look. It's also water-resistant up to 330 feet. Buy Here Citizen Eco-Drive Japanese quartz movement gives this watch its functional quality, but its genius is that it's powered by light - either natural or artificial - which means that it's literally as automatic as the sun. A great everyday watch at a great price. Buy Here Seiko Prospex Diver Watch This watch was made for the Japanese market, which Seiko usually reserves their best watches for exclusively. That means you're getting a quality watch that you can't find anywhere else in the world. This automatic watch for under $1500 is waterproof to 660 feet, it's deadly accurate, and thanks to the wonders of modern technology, you can get it right on Amazon without having to fly to Japan. Buy Here Tissot Heritage Visodate This Swiss watch has a classic, almost retro look, which stands out in a world full of flashy, "busier" watches. This is something that men wore when men were still men, and when class was worn with quiet tastefulness. Buy Here Invicta Pro Diver Watch This diver watch is water-resistant to 990 feet and unlike most similar style watches, it's not all that expensive. Shhh, I won't tell anyone if you won't. Buy Here Junghans Max Bill I'm in love with this dress watch. It's beautiful without being ornate, classy without being too dressy. In short, it's the perfect businessman's watch. It looks like something straight out of Mad Men, only without the liver failure and stolen identities. Buy Here Oris Classic Swiss Automatic Amazon Stainless steel case with a fixed stainless steel bezel. Black dial with silver-tone hands and index hour markers. Arabic numerals mark the 3, 9, and 12 o'clock positions and minute markers around the outer rim. The watch is powered by a mechanical movement capable of providing a 38-hour power reserve. Buy Here Junghans Form A Automatic Amazon A self-winding movement powers the hands of this watch, the Junghans Form A Automatic is encased inside a robust stainless steel body equipped with 50-meter water resistance. A white dial boasts a set of slim hands and stick indexes, creating a refined look, and the tan calfskin leather strap with a traditional buckle makes this automatic men's watch under $1000 handsome AF. Buy Here M79 Automatic from Timex Amazon A vintage Timex reissue with self-winding Japanese movement, the M79 men's automatic watch is a classically-styled reissue from 1979. This time around, Timex replaced the quartz with automatic Japanese movement that winds itself with the motions of your wrist plus the exhibition case back offers a view into the inner workings of the watch's movement. Buy Here MSAR Automatic from Marathon Huckberry All the robust dependability of a dive watch in a lightweight, everyday size. More commonly referred to as the "TSAR (Tritium Search and Rescue)," the Marathon Diver's Quartz features a top-of-the-line Swiss-made automatic movement, and is fully ISO 6425-compliant, meaning it meets strict international standards for water resistance, durability, and dial legibility. Buy Here Alpina Seastrong Diver Amazon Stainless steel case with a black leather strap. Fixed stainless steel bezel. Silver dial with luminous silver-tone arrow-shaped hands and index hour markers and minute markers make this one of the best men's automatic watches under $1000. Buy Here The BroBible team writes about gear that we think you want. Occasionally, we write about items that are a part of one of our affiliate partnerships and we will get a percentage of the revenue from sales. Within some corners of the watch industry, there is a perception that you can't get a quality automatic timepiece without spending luxury-level prices. But nothing could be further from the truth. Fifty years removed from the onset of the quartz crisis and smack dab in the middle of the current Apple Watch takeover, there are still loads of great automatic watches you can find for under $1,000 — as long as you know where to look. And that's where we come in. We've rounded up our favorite microbrands, entry-level luxury Swiss watchmakers, and a reliable standby out of Japan to bring you the 15 best automatic watches under $1,000. For this guide, we had but two requirements: All watches had to have an automatic movement, and they had to be priced at $1K or less. With those parameters in place, we got to work hunting down the best the industry has to offer and came up with more than a dozen gems. From divers and pilot's watches to trendy integrated bracelet sports watches and classic everyday timepieces, from vintage-inspired to the ultra-modern, we left no stone unturned in our pursuit of the best affordable autos. Any one of these timepieces would make a great addition to your collection, and they're all cheap enough that you could even pick up a couple without feeling guilty. So take a look below to discover our picks for the best automatic watches under $1,000. Tissot PRX Powermatic 80 One of the most successful watch releases of 2021 was Tissot's PRX, a well-finished integrated bracelet '70s throwback that brought Gerald Genta style to the masses. But because it was powered by a simple quartz movement, many watch enthusiasts held off on buying one. Now Tissot has released an automatic version of the PRX with the same stunning retro case and bracelet, a new premium (and Royal Oak-adjacent) waffle dial, and a Powermatic 80 movement with 80 hours of power reserve. And since it still costs under $700, you literally have no excuse for not buying one. Case Size: 40mm Water Resistance: 100m Movement: ETA Powermatic 80.111 Purchase: $650+ Baltic Aquascaphe Paris-based Baltic has quickly become one of the highest-regarded and best-known microbrands in the world, and they even contributed a watch to the illustrious Only Watch charity event in 2021 alongside uber-luxury brands like F.P. Journe and MB&F. And Baltic owes a good chunk of their success to the Aquascaphe. The diver is almost certainly the brand's most popular model, with its sapphire bezel insert, original sandwich dial, and tropic rubber strap (or beads of rice bracelet) giving off pitch-perfect vintage-style vibes. Case Size: 39mm Water Resistance: 200m Movement: Miyota 9039 Purchase: $684+ Yema Flygraf Pilot Like Baltic, Yema is an independent French watchmaker — but don't call them a microbrand. Yema has been around for decades, and they were churning out icons like the Superman diver and Rallye racing chronograph back in the '60s and '70s. These days, they're still debuting killer models, like this unique take on a pilot's watch. With a brushed dial, generously-applied BCGW Super-LumiNova, an impressive 300m water resistance, an in-house movement, and a stunning vertically-brushed steel bezel that recalls the Patek Aquanaut, this is a ton of watch for the money. Case Size: 39mm Water Resistance: 300m Movement: YEMA2000 In-house Caliber Purchase: $690+ Halios Fairwind We now return to the realm of microbrands for what may be the most-lauded microbrand of them all. Vancouver-based Halios makes some of the hardest-to-obtain watches in the industry, and the Fairwind is their latest and greatest diver. Arguably the best dive watch one can buy for under a grand, the Fairwind is noteworthy not just for its attractive angular design and trademark quality construction, but for its incredible bracelet. The Fairwind's bracelet is an impeccably finished, fully articulating, flat link number with an innovative quick-adjust mechanism that functions by pushing a button on the clasp. Case Size: 39mm Water Resistance: 200m Movement: Sellita SW200-1 Purchase: $775 Lorier Hyperion By now, you shouldn't be surprised to see so many microbrands on a list such as this. With small batch numbers, microbrands are able to dial into what their buyers want in a watch and are able to really maximize their value. Take New York-based Lorier's Hyperion, for instance. Here we have a GMT watch powered by a Swiss automatic movement for well under $1,000. It has an original vintage-inspired design that can stop traffic, a plexiglass Pepsi bezel for serious retro cred, and Lorier's signature design language and cult-favorite bracelet. If you're on the hunt for a GMT watch under a grand, this is the one to get — if you can get ahold of one, that is. Case Size: 39mm Water Resistance: 100m Movement: Soprod C125 GMT Purchase: $799 Victorinox I.N.O.X. Mechanical Built by the same brand that makes the ubiquitous Swiss Army Knife, the quartz Victorinox I.N.O.X. is one of the toughest watches in the world. This version classes things up a bit by trading in just a hair of that utility for a heightened sense of luxury. The Swiss-made Sellita SW200-1 movement is visible through the exhibition caseback, the chunky stainless steel case sports some excellent contrasting finishing, the guilloché patterned dial is meant to invoke the handle of a Swiss Army Knife, and the watch is available on a first-of-its-kind wooden strap. Case Size: 43mm Water Resistance: 200m Movement: Sellita SW200-1 Purchase: $825+ Squalo 1521 There are summer watches and there are summer watches. This is the latter. A maker of dive watch cases since the 1960s (including for Blancpain, once upon a time), Squalo already has an illustrious horological history. But they aren't resting on their laurels. The brand has churned out many fun new models in recent years, including the now-iconic 1521 with its ocean blue sunray dial. A modern classic, the watch is basically summer on your wrist, with a classic case that will never go out of style and 500m water resistance to sweeten the pot. Case Size: 42mm Water Resistance: 500m Movement: ETA 2824-2 Purchase: $859 Mido Multifort Patrimony A member of the Swatch Group conglomerate, Swiss heritage brand Mido frequently gets lost in the shuffle with better-known stablemates Omega, Longines, Hamilton, Tissot, and Rado. But you shouldn't sleep on Mido, as the 103-year-old brand makes some seriously high-quality pieces. The Multifort Patrimony is one of them. A modern take on pre-mid-century styles, this handsome watch offers up an interesting blend of styling cues with its syringe hands, pulsometer scale, box crystal, and beautifully curved lugs. It's totally unique and would be at home in any collection. Case Size: 40mm Water Resistance: 50m Movement: Mido Caliber 80 (base ETA C07.621) Purchase: $890 Farer Bradfield If you know your watch brands, then you should be able to spot a Farer from across the room. In just a few short years, the British microbrand has established a consistent and highly recognizable design language built around fun and unexpected color combinations. And one of the best examples of that is this unorthodox pilot's watch: The Bradfield's white dial features a stepped inner minute ring infilled with sky blue Super-LumiNova, alpha hands in creamy yellow, and applied navy Arabic numerals outlined by that same sky blue lume. Case Size: 39.5mm Water Resistance: 50m Movement: Sellita SW200-1 Purchase: $890+ Christopher Ward C60 Sapphire Perhaps no brand is more synonymous with the term "bang for your buck" than Christopher Ward. The original direct-to-consumer online brand was founded with the intention of providing affordable Swiss-made luxury watches to the masses, and they have been more successful at that feat than anyone could have imagined. One of CW's most popular watches is their C60 Sapphire, an innovative take on their flagship Trident dive watch that uses a colored sapphire dial for a touch of avant-garde style. Blue and black versions are available, but for an added dose of fun and originality, we recommend going for the just-released orange version. Case Size: 40mm Water Resistance: 600m Movement: Sellita SW200-1 Purchase: $950 Doxa Sub 200 Speaking of fun and colorful, say hello to Doxa. One of the most iconic dive watch brands ever (noted undersea explorer Jacques Cousteau was a big fan), Doxa returned to the U.S. market just this year after years away. So it's time to get reacquainted, and the best way to do that is with their entry-level diver. The Sub 200 offers all of the robust reliability and pro-level diving specs you'd expect from Doxa, as well as the brand's trademark retina-burning colorways. From orange to yellow to this gorgeous aqua blue, every option is a winner. Case Size: 42mm Water Resistance: 200m Movement: ETA 2824-2 Purchase: $950+ Autodromo Group B Series II Watches just don't get any cooler than this. Retro-inspired design? Check. Trendy integrated bracelet looks? Check. Interesting backstory? This watch was inspired by Group B rally cars of the 1980s, which were known for their ridiculous power output and the dangerousness of their races... so that's a big check. The Group B has just about everything going for it, from its bimetal stainless steel and titanium case to its dial that recalls Group B race car tachymeters to its outstanding color options. This is a watch that presses all the right buttons. Case Size: 39mm Water Resistance: 50m Movement: Miyota 9015 Purchase: $975 Certina DS PH200M Like Doxa, Certina is a Swiss heritage brand that returned to U.S. shores this year after many years away. And boy, are we happy to see them. Another underrated Swatch Group member, Certina offers loads of killer watches at bargain prices, but none are better than this outstanding diver. A reissue of one of the brand's divers from the '60s, the modern-day DS PH200M has been updated with a striking domed and engraved ceramic bezel that you won't see anywhere else, along with an 80-hour Powermatic movement that's visible through a sapphire caseback. Case Size: 42.8mm Water Resistance: 200m Movement: ETA Powermatic 80.611 Purchase: $990 Hamilton Khaki Field Murph There have been loads of iconic movie watches over the years, from Steve McQueen's Heuer Monaco in Le Mans to James Bond's many Omega Seamasters. But none are quite like the Murph. Originally made by Hamilton specifically for the 2014 sci-fi film Interstellar, the movie prop plays a significant role in the film's climax. Consistent badgering by fans led Hamilton to finally make a production recreation of the watch in 2019, and it's been a brand mainstay ever since. The versatile vintage-inspired field watch even has a special Easter egg for fans of the film, with the word "Eureka" printed in morse code in lacquer on the seconds hand. Case Size: 42mm Water Resistance: 100 Movement: Hamilton Caliber H-10 (base ETA C07.111) Purchase: $995 Seiko Presage Sharp Edged Date Seiko's luxury offshoot Grand Seiko certainly doesn't have any watches under $1,000 — or under $2,000, for that matter. But Seiko offers a bit of Grand Seiko style with their premium Presage Sharp Edged series. This watch features a highly-intricate Japanese Asanoha patterned dial, sapphire crystals on the front and back, GS-style hands and indices with Lumibrite, a sharp-angled and expertly-finished case and bracelet, and the 6R35 caliber movement with its 70 hours of power reserve. The Sharp Edged Date makes for an excellent everyday watch that incorporates a touch of the Grand Seiko experience. Case Size: 39.3mm Water Resistance: 100m Movement: Seiko Caliber 6R35 Purchase: $1,000 Is there a certain watch you're pining after but just can't justify the cost? Then you should have a look at our guide to the 24 best affordable alternatives to iconic luxury watches. In this guide, we take a look at 8 heavy hitters, including the Rolex Submariner, Omega Speedmaster, and Audemars Piguet, and offer three similar, affordably priced alternatives to each. Your wallet will thank you.
